POLITICAL POINTS.

Rumors of a Cabinet Break-up Absurd and Unfounded.

Louisiana Circulars Call for Five per cent. Assessments.

California's Republican Ticket Congressional Nominations.

CABINET GOSSIP.

WASHINGTON, September 2. Secretary Lincoln is amused more than annoyed at the endeavors of certain individuals to break up the president's cabinet and furnish the executive offices. In conversation with friends Mr. Lincoln took occasion to refer to the talk about impending cabinet changes. He expressed himself freely and practically, saying there is the greatest good feeling and cordiality between the president and each member of the cabinet. All talk about a cabinet break-up is not only unfounded but absurd. If Secretary Folger is nominated governor of New York he will probably resign, but if he should not be nominated there is no the slightest likelihood of a change in the treasury department. The object of Teller's visit to Colorado was to attend the mining exposition at Denver, and not as a prospective successor to Senator Chilcott; and his friends say Teller has no idea of leaving the cabinet to enter the senate, for had such been his desire he would not have left the senate to enter the cabinet. The rumor that Postmaster General Howe is to withdraw from the cabinet is fully as impracticable as any other of the changes suggested.

POLITICAL NOTES.

WASHINGTON, September 2.—The Post publishes an assessment circular emanating from the republican campaign committee of the Third congressional district of Louisiana, calling for contributions of 5 per cent. of their salaries from employes of the department in Washington credited to Louisiana.

DUBUQUE, Ia., September 2.—Griffiths, democratic candidate for congress in this district, has withdrawn from the field.

NOMINATIONS.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 2.—John Weil the present incumbent, is nominated state treasurer.

The first railway district this morning nominated Charles F. Reed, of Yolo, railway commissioner. The Third district nominated E. M. Gibson, of Alameda, commissioner and comptroller, Augustus Webster. The First congressional district convention nominated Paul Newman for congress.

The state convention passed resolutions thanking the officers and adjourned sine die. The Fourth congressional district convention nominated by acclamation Charles W. Dana, of San Luis Potosi, for member of the state board of equalization.

CLEVELAND, September 2.—Prohibitionists of the twenty-first district to-day nominated W. H. Downe for congress.

Barbecue Notes.

DENVER, September 2. The procession will consist of the military, the fire department, the Maennerchor, and the state officials and citizens in carriages, after which will follow the trades exhibit, representing nearly every business in the city. The procession will form at ten o'clock and pass through the principal streets of the city. The state and city officials and the invited guests will proceed to Argo park at 2 o'clock, where will take place the feast. The fatted ox will be done to a turn at 2 o'clock sharp, when four thousand people will be served at a single sitting. Besides the roasted ox, a large number of sheep and turkeys will be roasted and served on this occasion. The people when returning from the barbecue will be invited to view the pyrotechnic display on Capitol Hill square.

A Race of Flyers.

CHICAGO, September 2. Following is the account of the distribution race between Santa Claus and Fannie Weatherspoon at Hartford yesterday, in the race open to all except St. Julien, Maud S and Trinket. The only entries were Santa Claus and Weatherspoon; the former favorite at $50 to $20. In the first heat Fannie had the pole. She broke on the turn but caught and the two passed the quarter neck and neck. Then the sulkeys collided and the spokes flew but neither driver was unseated. Fannie broke and Santa Claus taking four lengths lead at the half won in 2.21. In the second heat Fannie went off in a break nearly to the turn, giving Santa Claus eight lengths. Fannie closed up and was only two lengths behind at the half. She drew up closer, got her nose at the leader's wheel and made a lively race to the wire, Santa Claus holding the lead safely. In the third heat they went even to the turn when Santa Claus opened the way at the quarter, Fannie reducing the lead when she broke at the middle of the stretch settling at a half dozen lengths back. Santa Claus held up a trifle and Fannie closed to three lengths, but broke at the head of the stretch. This ended it and the stallion won by three lengths in 2.21¼.

YELLOW FEVER.

Precautions Against the Spread of the Disease.

CHICAGO, August, September 2.—A Washington special says additional particulars from Brownsville to Dr. Hamilton, supervising surgeon of the general marine hospital service, shows about a fifth of the population are down with fever. Precautions taken by Dr. Hamilton against the spread of the disease from Brownsville are almost perfect in character and there is little fear of an epidemic beyond the limit of the four counties included in the outer cordon of guards. The affected district includes the counties of Sepacia, with 3,000 population; Starr, with 8,300; Hidalgo, with 4,300, and Cameron, in which Brownsville is situated, 10,000. The cordon of guards patrolling the outer world against emigrants from these counties is composed of 125 Texas rangers stretched along the 124 miles of railway running between Corpus Christi and Laredo. An inner post is composed of a like guard, smaller in number, however, thrown around the western section of the city. Persons desiring to leave the city can go but into the districts above spoken of and having their baggage fumigated and their more contagious effects destroyed. Beyond the cordon on the Corpus Christi and Laredo, however, no person is allowed to go as the road to all intents and purposes is a "dead line," and persons attempting to cross the limits are likely to be shot down. On each of the innumerable wagon roads running from the railroad into the district are stationed for a distance of seven or eight miles a well armed relay of guards whose duty it is to prevent the approach of persons from the infected districts throughout the countries between the inner and outer guards.

PHILADELPHIA, September 2. Six cases and two deaths from yellow fever in quarantine.

BROWNSVILLE, September 2.—One hundred and three new cases and five deaths, all Mexicans. Many Americans are dangerously sick. Dr. Murray and force are doing good service. The fever is abating in Matamoras. Four deaths and no new cases in Fort Brown. The weather is cloudy, with light north winds.

BOSTON, Mass., September 2.—The steamer Ardanthana, from Porto Rico, had five cases of yellow fever on board.

Dublin Police Difficulty.

DUBLIN, September 2.—The emergency committee presented 60 men to be sworn in as special constables. A difficulty however is raised as to the form of the oath which obliges the person taking it to swear that he is not a member of a secret order or political society. The secretary of the secret committee states that the committee was not a political body. The lord lieutenant has been directed that the case be stated for opinion by law officers, which he communicated today. If it is favorable about 1,000 men will be at once available. The whole police force, comprising 883 men, have left the service. Only officers numbering 25 remain.

Several men have been fined for intimidating the police who did duty with the military last evening. Lord Spencer is consulting with Chief Hodle and his officers. Arrangements for police duty seem incomplete.

It is stated a memorial has been sent to the chief secretary offering if the men who were discharged are reinstated all the men will return to duty and waive all other claims pending the action of the commissioners to consider their grievances. The police will hold a meeting to-night to discuss the answer which is expected to this communication; or, as they term it, the ultimatum. The law officers are of the opinion that the services of Orangemen may be accepted as special constables but of course, in their capacity as citizens not as Orangemen.

The city is in a most excited state. The military to-night charged on a mob surrounding the O'Connell statue and cleared the spot. Police on duty at Sackville street are making frequent charges in order to clear the sides of the street. There is much stone-throwing. Several persons have been wounded and a number of fires made. Military and police were much hooted, but showed great forbearance. It is stated the police have expressed their determination to again throw off their uniform Monday if the dismissed men are not reinstated.

Clever Robbery of Railroads.

KANSAS CITY, September 2.—L. D. Ross, ticket scalper, has been arrested for selling bogus railroad tickets. He was ticket agent for the Hannibal last spring. He was a fast man and to meet his expenses printed a lot of counterfeit coupons in Quincy and sold them to scalpers. In June he was discharged for cutting rates. He then went into business here and sold bogus tickets, thence to Chicago and St. Louis. Scalpers believe he has issued of Cheyenne tickets alone, with drawback at Denver, about $9,000 worth. It is estimated the total output is $200,000. He was released on bail to-day, but rearrested on additional evidence and is now under $25,000. Officials say tickets were issued in the name of the P., D. & E. and Lake Erie & Western roads, to be used over the St. Joe, Atchison, Missouri Pacific and U. P. roads. Letters were found in Emporia and Quincy implicating Ross. Tickets were sold to certain points to parties going only to intermediate points, and were then sold to confederate scalpers at these points. The tickets were then destroyed and never reached the auditor's office.

Dissatisfied Miners.

MANCHESTER, September 2. At a conference of miners held to-day it was decided to demand an advance in wages and if an increase is not obtained by October to make a general stand for their terms throughout. It was recommended that political associations be formed among miners with a view to supporting candidates for parliament who are favorable to changes sought by the miners in mining legislation. It was also resolved to erect a marble statue in memory of McDonnald in front of the Miners' Hall at Durham.

Guiteau's Skull.

PHILADELPHIA, September 2.—Dr. E. O. Shakespeare, of this city; Dr. J. W. Fluoid, of New York, and J. C. McConnell, of Washington, surgeons engaged in examining a portion of Guiteau's brain, met and decided to issue a report showing results next week. The report will have no reference to Guiteau's sanity. It will be a comprehensive statement of the condition of the brain and the nature of the decease if any.

Mules for Egypt.

ST. LOUIS, September 2. Colonel Swinley, of the English royal artillery, purchased in this market to-day 500 mules for service in Egypt. The mules range from five to nine years of age and from fourteen to fifteen hands high and are pronounced by Colonel Swinley and Dr. Cox, his veterinary surgeon, the finest mules they ever saw. This is the only purchase so far made in this country. They will be sent by rail once to New York, when they will go direct to Alexandria by steamer.

Mining Market.

NEW YORK, September 2.—Mining stocks dull, except Comstock, which advanced. Consolidated Virginia, 89 to 94; Colorado, 23 to 34; Sierra Nevada, 53½, closing at 58. Robinson sold at 1.65; Little Chief, 70 to 65. Sales for the day, 78,850 shares.

EGYPTIAN WAR.

Wolseley Preparing for an Immediate Attack

To Overwhelm the Rebellion by a Crushing Blow.

De Lesseps' Account of Arabi's Fighting Strength.

ISMAILIA, September 2. Sultan Pasha and Ferriel Pasha are still here but will advance with our forces to Zagazig, where Ferriel Pasha will again take up the government. They carry with them a number of proclamations which will be distributed by friendly Bedouins. They have already entered into successful negotiations with some of the Bedouin chiefs and those have promised to bring over a considerable number of their tribes from Arabi Pasha.

ALEXANDRIA, September 2.—The man-of-war Minotaur shelled the enemy's line between Ramleh and Aboukir this morning.

ISMAILIA, September 2.—A brigade has arrived here from Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, September 2. It is believed General Wolseley will attack the enemy Sunday and Monday with a view to overwhelming the rebellion at one stroke.

ISMAILIA, September 2.—It is reported on good authority that the commandant at Tel el Kebir is inclined to abandon the cause of Arabi Pasha.

PORT SAID, September 2.—The troop ships Orient and Malabar and the steamer Ormali, the latter with mules and forage, have entered the canal. The health of troops and sailors is excellent.

KASSASSIN, September 2.—A wounded Arab officer states that hardly had the British cavalry swept through the Arab ranks in the fight here recently, when a horde of Bedouins poured in and began to strip and rob the dead and wounded of both sides, killing any of the wounded who were able to resist.

ALEXANDRIA, September 2.—The Admiralty launch took a trip very close to the shore on Saturday and fired several shots at the enemy's entrenchments. The latter replied with a well-directed fire, whereupon the Minotaur sent a heavy shell in their midst and dispersed the enemy.

A correspondent visited Meks Saturday and found that work on entrenchments there had ceased, and that about 6,000 of the enemy had been withdrawn.

ISMAILIA, September 2.—Engineers have conquered the difficulty of tainted water by digging holes in the sands by the side of the canal. The water when filtered through the sand is clear. The camp at Mahmoosh has been removed because of bad odors, and another camp has been formed two miles further on. An Egyptian engineer officer who was found wounded after lying 48 hours on Kassassin battle ground, stated Arabi Pasha informed the men who participated in that fight that there were only two weak British regiments at the front and there was plenty of time to drive the Christians into the sea. The officer thinks Arabi's army utterly demoralized.

BOSTON, September 2. A dispatch from Paris to her majesty says: De Lesseps, who has just arrived here, interviewed on Egyptian affairs said: It should be known regarding the Egyptian matter that the movement is a national one. He was convinced Arabi Pasha had the whole nation at his back. His force at present was between 25,000 and 30,000 Arabs. He has arms for 200,000, and when he needs men can get them. DeLesseps had every reason to be satisfied with manner in which Arabi behaved toward the canal. The English had no need of the canal for their operations. The Arabs had not placed a price on his head. On the contrary, after the English had landed at Suez, he had received a letter from Arabi saying he knew that it was not his fault and giving him notice that the sweet-water canal would be cut. English sailors had behaved very badly, firing right and left in the streets and killing many Arab women and children. He thinks the war will be a long one and its final result cannot yet be forecast. No serious operation could be undertaken until the hot weather and overflow of the Nile were at an end. It was not true that Arabi had mutilated English dead and wounded. He had heard nothing of that from officers in Egypt. England has been long intending to get her finger in Egypt on one pretext or another. The whole trouble has been caused by intrigues of Malet, and for the purpose of giving England this opportunity. He had not seen any of the actual fighting but there had been many more killed and wounded among the English than reported. There were also many losses by sunstroke and some cholera. When he had been in Egypt before the troubles began, he had found some opposition to Arabi among Bedouin chiefs, but now he believed they were all for Arabi. If Arabi was killed or captured, war would not on that account come to an end. The English might buy some of the chiefs, but that would not help them much. The khedive was a man who would never be able to govern the country, even if England succeeded in re-establishing his authority. It would end if the English were successful in his being deposed by them or in his being merely nominal ruler. At present he was a prisoner and nothing he did had any weight with the Egyptian people. DeLesseps in reply to the question if the Suez canal trouble was not what might occur with the Panama canal said: "No. The Americans have never interfered in matters that did not concern them, while it has been the invariable practice of England to be always meddling in other people's affairs. No, I have no apprehension that Panama will ever hear a cannon fired." DeLesseps then said work on the Panama canal was progressing favorably and was being pushed forward with the greatest zeal.

Crop Returns.

MILWAUKEE, September 2. Crop reports to the Chamber of Commerce shows the weather this week has been very unsettled, the rain fall being considerable and widely extended over the northwestern states. Only isolated localities complain of the damage. The temperature has been cool and aid saving. Again though the spring is impeded. Advices are good and the yield better than for years. Early figures as to winter wheat are confirmed, except that there is a decline of 20 to 25 per cent. in Michigan. Spring wheat is uncertain yet, but increased yield will balance the decreased acreage. It is believed prices will go lower yet, but not stay there long.

NASHVILLE, September 2.—Commissioner Hawkins reports the average condition of crops in Tennessee in August as follows: Corn 159, cotton 98, tobacco 119, sorghum 122, fruit and all kinds of products about par.

SLADE THE OUTLAW.

Reminiscences Connected With an Exposition Exhibit.

In the display of A. Jacobs & Co., the famous Latimer street clothiers, there is a beaded and gaudily colored buckskin suit on exhibition that attracts the attention of every passer-by. This suit was made for and worn by John Alfred Slade, the noted outlaw and highwayman, and originally cost $750. It is an elaborate garment, all the material being of the finest and best quality. Slade's history was equal to that of the famous John A. Murrell, and his exploits are well remembered by all the old-time settlers in the west. At one time Slade became involved in a difficulty with a Frenchman named Jules, the Indian trader at Bovey's Crossing, on the Platte now called Julesburg. Slade was frightfully wounded by Jules, being fired upon with a double-barreled gun, loaded with buckshot, both barrels of which took effect, and to finish the job Jules emptied the full contents of his dragoon pistol into Slade's body. Slade was not killed, however, and, despite the fact that he was so horribly shot, he lived to take most horrible vengeance upon Jules, whom he killed in a most barbarous manner, finally dying with his boots on at the hands of a vigilance committee in Alder Gulch, Montana.

The true story of Slade's revenge makes interesting reading. Jules, the Indian trader, was a French Canadian, who had spent the greater part of his life among the Indians of the plains. This was a wild and dissolute career. He feared no danger and brooked no rival. His principal trade was derived from the Ogalalla Sioux, of whom Dogbelly was then chief. The Arapahoes, Cheyennes and Utes were also his customers, and at that time those tribes were friends and allies, and of course Jules was driving profitable bargains in dealing with the liquids and trinkets to the Indians for their furs and skins. Upon the establishment of the overland line of coaches to California, Jules was much incensed, as he claimed it was an innovation upon the rights of the Indians and the traders, and would bring too many whites upon the plains. He waged incessant war upon the overland line, with the aid of Indians and half-breeds, by running off stock and committing other depredations, which were continued without restraint until John Alfred Slade appeared upon the scene as a division agent from Fort Kearney west. This man was a refugee from justice, having killed a man in his native county of Clinton, Illinois. Soon after taking charge of the division, Slade became the terror of the road, and his bold and reckless daring involved him in numerous quarrels with stock thieves and others. His quick aim and steady nerve sent many a desperado to a bloody grave; in fact, he sought quarrels, and, to use the parlance of the times, "always got his man." A deadly feud existed between Jules and Slade, and the former resolved on his (Slade's) death. Knowing that on a certain day Slade would come down the road upon the overland coach, Jules laid for him at the station, and as the former alighted from the coach, fired upon him with his gun, both barrels of which took effect, and as his enemy lay writhing upon the earth, poured the contents of his dragoon pistol into his body, then mounting a horse, Jules rode into the mountains, fearing the vengeance of Slade's friends. Strange and unaccountable as it may seem, Slade was found to be alive and was carried into the station, and, though lingering upon the point of death for months, he recovered from his wounds and laid his plans for the capture of his enemy, who was finally hunted down and taken to Bovey's Station. The names of the captors of Jules were Nelson Vaughn, John Fry and another man, who is now a resident of Montana. Those three persons having secured Jules, sent a messenger for Slade and the two bloody men met again face to face; this time, however, Slade had the drop, being heavily armed and with the three armed captors of Jules at his back. Well knowing his doom was sealed, Jules stood up and demanded half a chance for his life. "You gave me no show," retorted Slade, "but take this and defend yourself," handing the Frenchman a pistol which he knew well would not revolve and in the next instant sent a ball through the forehead of Jules near the top of the skull, who reeled and fell. Slade and his party then retired to the next room to take a drink, but upon returning found that the prostrated Frenchman was gone. Horses were mounted and the country scoured to no effect, but upon returning to the station the wounded Jules was found in an outhouse covered up with hay. He was led out and shot through the mouth and again at the base of the right ear, which finished the job. Vaughn cut off the ears of the dead man and gave one to Slade, reserving the other. The two worthies then came to Denver with these bloody trophies in their pockets, and wore them out at the different bars on a prolonged spree, in slapping them on the counter as a tender for payment of drinks.

WHO THE BOSS IS.

The Question Decided at the Primaries Yesterday.

Howbert Delegates Elected by a Large Majority.

Full Result of the Voting in the City and County.

One of the most exciting primary elections that ever took place in Colorado Springs occurred yesterday, the issue being principally for the candidates to the state senate, Mr. Irving Howbert and Mr. T. C. Parrish. Considerable bitterness had been engendered in the campaign on account of issues of a personal nature. In this issue Mr. Parrish rather had the disadvantage from the fact he had had been personally attacked as to his political record, while to the contrary his opponent, Mr. Howbert, did not have his character assailed. During the entire morning of yesterday those interested in the nomination of both candidates did some very active work on the streets, and during the entire day the excitement was very intense.

Soon after the opening of the polls in precinct six and a half, a question arose as to the admission of democratic votes but for a time the feeling was so strong that it became necessary to close the ballot boxes. This disturbance was however soon quelled and voting was resumed and continued without interruption until the closing of the polls, at 7 o'clock p. m.

At the polls in precinct No. 6 the excitement was not quite as intense, although a number of personalities were indulged in as between those favoring the respective candidates. Early in the afternoon it was evident that the delegates on the Howbert ticket would carry precinct No. six, but that there would be such a majority in favor of Mr. Howbert in the southern precinct was quite a surprise. In the meantime news had been circulated that the Howbert delegates had been elected at Little Buttes, Fountain, Franceville, Ute, Rock, Colorado City, Monument and Edgerton, which announcement, perhaps, had its effect on the result of the vote in the city primaries. This gave Mr. Howbert 11 votes in the outside precincts, which it would be impossible to overcome and virtually settled the primaries in favor of Mr. Howbert. The excitement, however, kept up until the closing of the polls at seven o'clock. That a most desperate fight was made there is no doubt, and it was thought by the majority that Mr. Parrish would win in the south and Mr. Howbert in the north.

By nine o'clock the result of the election was made known in both precincts. It was as follows:

PRECINCT NO. SIX.—FOR SENATOR.

Parrish	111
Howbert	288

FOR CONSTABLE, SHORT TERM.

L. J. Tell	212
William Easton	108

CONSTABLE—LONG TERM.

John Beall	284

FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

John Pixley	115
James P. Easterly	38

By the above it will be seen that the vote was exceedingly large, in fact more so than in any previous primary in Colorado Springs, the vote almost equaling that of the southern precinct.

In the southern precinct, No. 61, the aggregate vote cast was 464, an exceedingly large one. The result as given in this precinct was as follows:

Parrish	142
Howbert	322
Beall	246
Sexton	293
Tell	146

When the announcement was made that Mr. Howbert had been without doubt elected considerable jollification was indulged in by his friends and supporters. Bonfires were built on the corners of Tejon and Pike's Peak avenue and Hiterfano and Tejon streets.

Mr. Howbert, the successful candidate, was at Manitou at the time the result was announced, but upon his return he was placed in a carriage and drawn through the streets by his friends and admirers headed by the First Regiment Cavalry band. There was quite an elaborate supply of fireworks along the line of march. During the entire evening there was considerable enthusiasm on the street, but by twelve o'clock everything was quiet and all had departed for their homes.

MANITOU.

The primary at Manitou was held last evening. It was called to order and balloting began at 8 o'clock. Among those present were Messrs. Howbert, Crowell, Anderson and Eaton of this city. After the polls were open some ten minutes, they were closed. Some 60 or 70 republican votes were in line at this time, but were not allowed to be cast as they would not be for the desired ticket. Messrs. Rand and Cree were elected delegates.

Arthur's Health.

NEWPORT, September 2. The president finds the salt air disagrees with him and is very nervous and mortified on account of a dispatch that he is by no means well. Men and physicians caution him to stay ashore and guard his health.

The President Aground.

NEW YORK, September 2.—President Arthur remained on board the Dispatch all night. Three tugs are alongside. It is thought she will be pulled off at high water. Her bow is very much elevated, the copper being in full view from the shore. The president intended to go east early this morning.

LATER. The Dispatch came off without assistance, and is now on her way to this harbor.

Wyoming Copper.

CHEYENNE, September 2.—The first copper smelter is being erected in the new copper camp near Fort Laramie. The ore runs from 25 to 80 per cent. in copper and the supply is as large as the Lake Superior region.

The Pennsylvania Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., September 2.—After the meeting of the lodge of the Amalgamated Association to-night several members were seen who had been in attendance. From them it was learned that a majority of the lodge and delegates appointed by the district meeting were generally in favor of continuation of the strike.

Shooting Stars.

Wm. Huggins, in the Nineteenth Century.

On almost any fine night, after a short watch of the heavens, we may see the well-known appearances of "shooting-stars." At ordinary times these are small, are far between, and occur indifferently in all parts of the heavens; but on certain nights they show themselves in great numbers, and of such brilliancy as to present a spectacle of much magnificence. On such occasions one remarkable feature presents itself. The meteors all shoot forth from one spot, which is called the radiant point. A little consideration will show that this appearance is due to perspective, and presents the vanishing point of the parallel courses in which the meteors are moving. Hence we learn that they all belong to an enormous swarm of these bodies which the earth is meeting; and, further, it is possible to find the direction in which the swarm is moving relatively to the earth. Now, the researches of Olbers, H. A. Newton and Adams showed that the November meteors really form a planetary swarm, revolving round the sun in about 33½ years. Then the investigations of Schiaparelli, Leverrier and Oppolzer brought out the astonishing result that the path of the November meteors is really identical with that of a comet discovered by Tempel in 1865. Schiaparelli showed further that another independent group of meteors which appears in August has an orbit identical with the third comet of 1862. We are thus led to see the close physical connection and oneness of origin, if not, indeed, identity of nature of comets and of these meteor swarms. Now, the meteors belonging to these swarms are for the most part too minute to pass unscathed through the fiery ordeal of ignition by our atmosphere: most happily they do not bombard us with an incessant Gatling discharge of meteoric stones, but are burned before they reach the earth. At other times small celestial masses do come down to us, which there can be little doubt are of the same order of bodies and similar in chemical nature. In these meteorites, which we can handle and analyze at our leisure, we possess probably good examples of the sort of stuff of which the nuclei of comets are composed. The question now arises, how far are the revelations of the spectroscope about comets in harmony with what we know of the chemical nature of these celestial waifs and strays? Meteorites may be arranged in a long series, passing from metallic iron alloyed with nickel at one extremity, to those of a stony nature, chiefly silicates, at the other. In meteorites more than 20 of the known terrestrial elements have been found, hydrogen, carbon and nitrogen, which the spectroscope has shown to be in comets. Here a difficulty presents itself; if the nebulæ matter itself were decomposed, we should expect to have a more complicated spectrum from the light of comets. It may be that in ordinary cometary phenomena we have not to do with the breaking up of the meteoric matter, but with the setting free of gases occluded within the meteoric matter which forms the comet's nucleus. In the year 1867 Prof. Graham extracted from a meteorite the gas it had brought down to us from celestial space. This meteorite was of the iron type, and yielded nearly three times its volume of gas, of which 85 per cent. was hydrogen, 5 per cent. carbonate oxide, and 10 per cent. nitrogen. Since that time Prof. Wright has experimented with a meteorite of the stony type, but containing small grains of metallic iron. This meteorite yielded similar gas, but in different proportions, there being a larger proportion of the oxide of carbon; whose at a low temperature carbon dioxide was chiefly given off. Now, in all these cases a spectrum similar to that of comets would be given by these gases under suitable conditions. Some years ago the writer, in conjunction with Prof. Nevil Story Maskelyne, examined the spectra of certain meteorites, and obtained in several cases a spectrum similar to that of comets. Some meteorites, like that from Bokkveldt, contains a large percentage of hydrocarbons. Prof. H. C. Vogel has recently experimented in the same direction, and finds that the gas which comes off from the meteorite he used gives a hydrocarbon spectrum mixed with that of carbonic oxide, and under certain conditions the spectrum of the hydrocarbon predominates, and assumes a character almost exactly similar to that of the bright comet of last year.

The Hero of the Jeannette Exposition.

Lieutenant Danenhower has given to a reporter of the Washington Star an account of Alexy, the hero of the Jeannette expedition, whose name was little known until found penned so often in the sad journal of Commander De Long. During all that march to death in the Lena Delta, it will be remembered, it was Alexy who went on ahead to explore the way, it was Alexy who secured for the wanderers their meager supply of food, it was Alexy who gave his coat to save De Long from freezing, and it was Alexy who, faithful to the end, at last succumbed and lay down to die among the latest survivors. This brave man was an Alaskan Indian, from St. Michael's, North Sound. He was finely proportioned, with small, delicate-looking hands and feet. Among the Jeannette's crew he was a general favorite, on account of his polite manners and readiness to help in any work. He learned the English alphabet, became expert at stuffing birds, and also learned to draw. He was a fine dancer, and often amused the crew by illustrations of Indian war-dances. He was very fond of his family, and at times became homesick, fearing his wife and little boy would not have sufficient clothing while he was away. Before sailing he had made arrangements to have his pay given to his wife. She will not know of his death until next spring, and it is thought that some arrangement will be made by which she will receive his pay up to that time.

By direction of the ... of the Republican State Central Committee, a convention of the republican party of Colorado is hereby called to meet at Denver on Thursday, September 14th, 1882, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various offices to be filled by election on Tuesday, November 7th, 1882, as follows:

One representative in the 48th congress.
One judge of the supreme court.
One governor.
One lieutenant governor.
One secretary of state.
One state treasurer.
One auditor of state.
One attorney general.
One superintendent of public instruction.
Two regents of the university.

The several counties of the state will be entitled to representation as fixed by the committee, as follows:

Gilpin	13	San Juan	5
Grand	2	Weld	9
Gunnison	11
Hinsdale	5	Total	311
Huerfano	6

The convention will transact the foregoing and such other business as may properly come before it.

It is recommended that the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh judicial districts select delegates at the same time of selecting delegates to this convention to nominate candidates for district judges and district attorneys.

JOHN L. ROUTT, Chairman.
GEORGE T. CLARK, Secretary.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Of the Fourth Judicial District.

Pursuant to the proceedings of the republican committee of the Fourth Judicial district of Colorado, a republican convention is hereby called to meet in Denver, September 14th, at twelve o'clock m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for district judge and a district attorney of said district, to be voted for at the approaching fall election.

The several counties in the district are entitled to representation in this convention as follows, to wit:

Chaffee county, twelve (12) delegates.
Douglas county, four (4) delegates.
El Paso county, thirteen (13) delegates.
Elbert county, three (3) delegates.
Park county, eight (8) delegates.
By order of the committee.

R. BERRY, Chairman.
GEO. A. WOOD, Secretary.

Papers in district please publish.

Republican County Convention.

Notice is hereby given that a republican county convention will be held at Court House hall in Colorado Springs, Colorado, Saturday, September 9th, 1882, at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating the candidates for the several offices to be filled by the people of El Paso county, at the general election which takes place November 7th, 1882, as follows:

One state senator.
Two members of the house of representatives.
One county commissioner.
One county sheriff for the unexpired term.
One justice of the peace for precincts No. 6 and No. 6½.
One road overseer for road district No. 6.

Also to select thirteen (13) delegates to represent El Paso county at the republican state convention and at the republican judicial convention of the fourth (4) judicial district, to be held at Denver, Colorado, Thursday, September 14th, 1882, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the said county convention.

The committee respectfully suggests that the several precincts hold their primaries on Saturday, September 2, 1882, at two o'clock p. m.

"The committee decided that precincts No. 6 and No. 6½ should be recognized separately, and that each precinct should send its own delegates to be voted for in their own precincts.

The committee having ascertained that the new precinct of Franceville contains a large number of voters, have decided to allow said precinct three votes in the convention; believing, however, that it is entitled to a greater representation, but prefer leaving the matter of a larger representation to be settled by the county convention.

By a resolution passed at the last county convention the several precincts were entitled to representation, as follows:

No.		Del.	No.		Del.
1.	B[illegible]	3	9.	Summit Park	1
2.	Table Rock	1	10.	Florissant	1
3.	Monument	5	11.	Manitou	2
4.	Husted	1	12.	Four Mile	1
5.	Colorado City	2	13.	Turkey Creek	1
6.	Col. Spgs. North	11	14.	Edgerton	1
6½	" " South	13	15.	Big Sandy	1
7.	Fountain	1	16.	Fisher's Mill	1
8.	El Paso	1	17.	Franceville	3

HENRY A. WILSON, Secretary.

If you are in any doubt as to whether there is bossism in this county, read the account of the Manitou primaries.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean takes at once a very sensible view of the Missouri campaign and a view which is not sensible. It is sensible in insisting that the Missouri republicans should hold a convention. It says: "The Filley plan goes upon the supposition "that the ammunition used in a losing battle "is wasted. This is a great mistake. A "properly conducted campaign waged for "principles and by honorable methods is an "important agency in the political education "of the people." We suppose it might be added that "the Filley plan" has the offices too much and the principles too little in view—and it is apparently this same trouble that leads the Inter-Ocean to take the further position which we have said is not sensible; viz, that the Missouri republicans should take advantage of an opportunity to make a political alliance. Now the republican party is certainly not a greenback party. Why then should republican votes aid greenbackers? And how can republicans doing this claim to be governed by principle?

The Free Thinkers' association has adjourned. About all that its members did was to show their contempt for those who did not think with them.—[Exchange.

This is a very common state of mind in this world. Politicians and especially stalwart politicians are rather given to it.

The discussion of political assessments still furnishes the papers something to talk about. One of the worst features of the case is that to some papers the question seems to be disposed of by saying that the democrats have done the same or worse. No doubt they have. The democratic party has committed many sins, but it is hard to see why this fact makes it right for republicans to copy democratic methods.

The Hon. T. C. Parrish has no reason for regret at his candidature. He entered this contest fully aware of the odds against him. His conduct was manly and outspoken. He had the disadvantage of a much more limited personal acquaintance and less extensive business relations than Mr. Howbert. He made a gallant fight, however, and worried "the boys" a good deal. Regardless of the unjustifiable personalities used toward him, he comes out of this fight, with the respect and sincere regard of many more people than he had at the beginning.

The greatest surprise is the vote in the southern precinct. There were hidden influences at work which are not now entirely known. But the majority of republican workers were faithful in their fight for Mr. Parrish. They fought honestly and earnestly. If they did not win, they deserved to win. They made a plucky fight. Tremendous pressure was brought to bear to draw them out of the fight but to no purpose. They can have a cleaner conscience than the men who were present at the councils of the Parrish party and then worked and voted for Mr. Howbert at the polls. They could not be bulldozed, and were loyal and earnest. They fought for no spoils or honors. It may not be known, but none of these republicans were candidates for office. Had their party been successful no members would have been candidates for office before the convention. Their fight was disinterested and for considerations which rose far above any personal honor or emolument. To have made such a fight was noble and grand. We were proud to be arrayed with them.

The Pueblo Chieftain under the title of "Tardy Praise" published a very sensible, manly article about the late Senator Hill, of Georgia. It contrasts the kind things which have been said of him since his death with the abuse heaped upon him a few years ago, and says: "These papers knew then as well "as they do now that Hill was not the politi"cal or personal fiend that they pictured "him to be." In view of the difficulty of being just to those opposed to us added to the frequent unwillingness, the following sentiment is worthy of earnest consideration: "How much better it would "be if we should give men credit for virtue "while they are living, instead of heralding "their excellences after they have passed to "that bourne where neither praise nor blame "can affect them. Ben Hill's career in con"gress would have been a much more useful "one than it was, and life would have had "more of sunshine for him, if one-half of "what has been said of him since he died, had "been said of him ten years ago. But "political ambition and rivalry deprived him "of this deserved meed, and exact justice "was never done the man till all that was "mortal of him had been laid beneath the "daisies. Praises can now do him no good; "when they might have benefited him they "were withheld; and if the history of his life "and death teaches anything, it is that the "world would be brighter and happier if all "should do justice to each other this side of "the grave." Perhaps if we would think calmly and honestly we would find that some of our political opponents are not as bad as we are too willing to think they are.

DEFEAT.

We were beaten yesterday and we frankly acknowledge it. Whatever we may have to say to the questionable methods that were used during this contest, we are frank to admit that the majority of the republicans of this county desired the nomination of Mr. Howbert. As we have stated again and again we recognize in Irving Howbert the strongest republican in the county to have competed for this nomination. There was no man who on personal grounds had any chance whatever of success against him. We considered, however, that there were other issues in this fight that were of far greater importance than the claims of any individual. We have nothing to apologize for in what we have done. We have endeavored to make a manly, honorable fight for what we considered important issues, and we should have done precisely the same thing had the result been seen before the fight ended. Many good republicans, whose sympathies were with us in any fight we have made heretofore on the same issues, differed with us in this respect and preferred to consider the contest a purely personal one. Whether they were right or we were right is a matter for future determination. We believe that the fruits of this contest will be bitter. There was an endorsement of practices and methods which were unrepublican and unfair. The county committee will feel endorsed in granting representation which the convention that created it denied. It will be an excellent precedent for the packing of future conventions, and future committees may think that the party will regard such "bossism" lightly. The same practices have been endorsed in different parts of the state and are likely to be endorsed in the state convention. Whether this will be good for the party or not there is no question in our mind.

So far as Mr. Howbert is concerned, our fight is over. We shall loyally support the ticket that will be nominated through the primaries yesterday. But so far as the issues which we considered paramount in this contest are concerned, our contest has only begun. We propose to carry on the fight that has been inaugurated. We believe that there is a ring here and we will fight it whenever it proposes to rule and dictate. One said before the primaries was successful in convincing it that certain practices were not either wise or advisable. Possibly the sweeping nature of the victory may change its opinion and that the "we have the power" may make it insolent and brave in facing public opinion. Whatever may happen we propose to carry on this fight within the party at its primaries whenever such issues are raised.

A short time after the polls were opened at precinct 6½ this afternoon, Messrs. B. W. Steele, Channing Sweet, D. B. Fairley, Captain Tuttle and a few other supporters of Mr. Parrish, planted themselves squarely in the way of the voters, and positively refused to let another man advance to the polls. For fully half an hour there was danger of a riot. "The unwarranted proceeding met with the unqualified condemnation of those on both sides who were in favor of law and order, and we believe that only this love for law and order prevented the crowd from bouncing those interfering gentlemen. Of course the latter endeavored to justify their unwarranted proceeding. They did this by claiming that the judges were prejudiced in favor of Mr. Howbert, and were permitting democrats favorable to him to vote, while they refused democrats who were favorable to Parrish. Of course this was only a pretense, for such men as Judge Cochran, Judge Bentley and Messrs. Hemenway, Parsons and Pease are not the persons to perjure themselves and exclude any who might happen to differ from them.—[Republic.

This is a highly colored report of the attempt of Mr. Parrish's supporters to have fair play at the polls. It was an undeniable fact up to the time this trouble began that it was quite easy for a democrat to vote for Mr. Howbert and very difficult for a democrat to vote for Mr. Parrish. The questions were fewer and less exact when put to a democrat of the Howbert party. The board of judges was composed exclusively of Mr. Howbert's friends. We have nothing to say against the intended fairness of this board but the friends of Parrish felt they had no chance before such a board. They meant to have fair play or else give up the primary contest. They did not wish to be bulldozed out of their victory and asserted their rights as republicans at the polls. They manifested this feeling in such an emphatic way that the judges and Howbert workers might know they would not be "counted" out.

The Faith of the Prince.

Machiavelli.

A prudent prince neither can nor ought to keep his word when it is hurtful, and the causes which led him to pledge it are removed. If all men were good this would not be good advice, but since they are wicked (tristi, a sad lot) and do not keep faith with you, you in return need not keep faith with them. It is necessary, indeed, to put a good color on this nature and to be skillful in stimulating and dissembling. But men are so simple, and governed so absolutely by their present needs, that he who wishes to deceive will never fail in finding willing dupes. One recent example I will not admit. Alexander VI. had no care or thought but how to deceive, and always found material to work on. No man ever had a more effective manner of asseverating, or made promises with more solemn protestations, or observed them less. And yet because he understood this side of human nature, his frauds always succeeded.

The Army of Egypt.

E. Dicey in the Nineteenth Century.

But the principal factor in the Egyptian problem is, for the moment, the military element. The army in Egypt is recruited exclusively from the fallaheen and half-savage negro tribes of the Soudan, while the officers are mainly Turks and Circassians, with a certain infusion of Arabs. The fallaheen detest military service; they are poorly paid and badly treated while in the ranks; they have no love for fighting and no martial spirit. Still, the same sense of the uselessness of struggling against their fate which accounts to my mind for their utter political apathy and indifference causes them, as soldiers, to acquiesce in discipline and to obey the orders of their officers so long as the dangers of disobedience is greater and more manifest than the danger of obedience. Now, up to three years ago the army was the faithful instrument of the will of the khedive. The Effendina—to use the popular name for the Viceroy—was lord and master. To disobey him was to incur certain and severe punishment; and therefore the Egyptian army always obeyed implicitly the orders of the khedive, except when they were in the face of an enemy, in which case their dread of being killed on the spot commonly overrode their fear of punishment on their return home. The first idea of insubordination was, curiously enough, suggested to them by Ismail Pasha. When the late khedive discovered that the Anglo-French ministry which he had himself called into being, under Nubar Pasha's advice, was not, as he had hoped, an instrument he could work to suit his own designs, but an effective check upon his arbitrary power, he determined to upset it. Being unwilling to act openly, he stirred up the army on the plea of a grievance for which, whether real or imaginary, they themselves would never have dreamed of demanding redress—to make a military demonstration against the Nubar ministry. As soon as the demonstration was made the khedive declared himself powerless to redress it. Nubar had to resign; and shortly after, on the same plea of the impossibility of resisting the will of the army, M. de Blignieres and Sir Rivers Wilson were dismissed from their posts. The khedive had succeeded in his object, but the army had learned to realize the truth that the government in Egypt had no power to resist its will.

The Use of the Capital I.

Philadelphia Times.

When General Alexander Ogle served Somerset's "frosty sons of thunder," in the Pennsylvania legislature, it fell to him to write in behalf of the democratic members, a letter to General Jackson, then stepping across the presidential threshold. Such work of the scribe was a labor of love, and in submitting to the caucus what he had written General Ogle said: "Gentlemen and members of the democratic party, I hold in my hand a letter addressed by General Alexander Ogle to General Andrew Jackson, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is a damned able paper." The members, gathering around, agreed that the letter was just the thing to make Old Hickory's heart thump with satisfaction, and all except one, a dapper little Philadelphian, spoke words of praise. This dandy of the house, fixing his glasses and scanning the page with the critic's smirk, ventured to remark: "Pardon me, general, I do not wish to assume to make a suggestion to so distinguished a gentleman as yourself, but I cannot refrain from saying that it is customary in the east, and I may say almost all the civilized countries of Europe, to write with the capital 'I' instead of the little 'i' in using the personal pronoun in epistolary correspondence." General Ogle drew down his heavy brows, piercing the dandy's marrow with the fierce shaft of scorn that shot from his eye. "Sir," he said, beginning with a hiss and ending with a roar, "when I write to such a great, such a towerin' man as General Andrew Jackson, democratic president of the United States, I abase myself, sir. I use as small an 'i' as I can put on paper; but, sir, if I should ever get to such a low down pitch as to have to write to a damned little snipe as you, I'd use an 'I,' sir, that would fill two sheets of foolscap, so help me God!"

Short Guide to Bankruptcy.

London Telegraph.

While one of the Bosniac delegates who waited upon the Emperor Franz Josef at the Hofburg a few weeks ago, was staying in Vienna, the owner of the hotel in which he lodged became a bankrupt. Hearing of his host's mishap, the worthy Beg sought an explanation of the term "bankruptcy," and having thoroughly mastered its meaning, proceeded, on his return to his native village, to impart his information to sundry of the faithful, his near relatives and close family connections. "This, O my brothers," he observed, "is the true and proper way to become a bankrupt. First you must hire a shop. Then you write to rich merchants in far-distant cities, inviting them to forward their wares to you for sale, and pledging yourself to pay them within a few months. As soon as you shall have received sufficient merchandise you must sell it for cash, or hide it carefully away. Then must you go to the judge and say to him: 'Beloved of Allah! I am a bankrupt. Here are £5; keep £4 of the £5 and proclaim you in bankruptcy; the other £1 will be divided among those who supplied you with goods. Later on you will remove to another town and begin this good and easy business over again. Thus may the the passing bitterness of insolvency be converted into the abiding sweetness of a comfortable independence. Bechesm! Upon my head be it!"

What Sir Walter Did for Scotland.

Glasgow Herald.

The public has been told that the game rental of Scotland has increased with marvelous rapidity during the last sixty years. That is a fact. Fifty years have now elapsed since the death of Sir Walter Scott, and for some years previous to the demise of Scotland's greatest literary son, the value of our Scottish heather had been on the increase growing little by little, year by year. No sooner had the magnificent poems of "Marmion" and the "Lady of the Lake" been published than the post-horse duty in Scotland began to increase, and in a year or two after the issue of these works it had more than doubled! Wealthy English people, their imaginations excited by the glowing descriptions which Sir Walter had penned of the scenic beauties of his native land, began to flock to Scotland both by land and sea. In one respect Sir Walter "made" Scotland; undoubtedly he attracted to it the tourists of many countries; he has been the means of filling its hotels with travelers, who penetrated into its glens, sailed on its lakes, climbed its mountains, and ultimately peopled its moors and forests, shot its grouse, and stalked its deer in the picturesque corries of the remotest highlands and islands.

Previous to the advent of the great "Wizard of the North," our Scottish moorfowl were almost unknown even to the epicures of the period, and the great stretches of Highland heather were, not so long ago, unproductive wastes, except where they afforded a scanty bite to an occasional drove of sheep. In the days of Sir Walter Scott it is questionable if the whole waste land of Scotland would yield an annual rental of fifty thousand pounds, whilst to-day the money derived from moor and forest is undoubtedly not less than half a million sterling, whilst the increase has accrued with a rapidity which is little less than wonderful. Since the steamboat and the railway train have done so much to annihilate distance, the highlands of Scotland have become annually more and more enriched by the red gold of the wealthy, who find a health-giving pastime on the surface of their heather. Hundreds of grouse are shot to-day for the tens which fell to the guns of our sportsmen "sixty years since;" and who, previous to the publication of "Waverley" or "Rob Roy," would have ventured to predict that men would be found in the year 1882 willing to pay from £500 to £5,000 a year for the privilege of shooting a few moorfowl or stalking a few deer on the mountains of Argyll or on the wastes of the county of Inverness?

That terrible scourge fever and ague, and its congener, bilious remittent, besides affections of the stomach, liver and bowels, produced by miasmatic air and water, are both eradicated and prevented by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable elixir, indorsed by physicians, and more extensively used as a remedy for the above class of disorders, as well as for many others, than any medicine of the age. Illinois Meadow Lands.

SPRINGFIELD, September 2.—The area of meadows as returned by the assessor to the state board of agriculture is the largest heretofore reported, 2,620,000 acres. The hay crop is in very good condition; quality not the best, rather rank. The total yield is 4,-360,000 tons, 346,000 more than in '78, which was the best crop recorded.

Chinese Merchants.

WASHINGTON, September 2.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury French has rendered a decision that Chinese merchants residing in the United States who go to China are required under the laws to obtain a certificate from their own government in order to return to this country just the same as Chinese merchants coming here for the first time.

In the Hebrides.

Blackwood's Magazine.

On landing at Scarinish, the puny port of the island, I was struck with the prevailing sluggishness. The visit of the steamer is a great event at every port in the Hebrides; but on an island which has no licensed house for the sale of whisky the steamer is the publican which supplies the wants of the local tipplers for the next week. A considerable number of people had gathered about the old pier, yet there was very little bustle or shouting. No one seemed to exert himself, or to be in the least hurry. All were content and at their ease. The civilization around was slow, dull, sluggish and quite unlike anything else in Europe. I found customs that were supposed to have died out, rites that long ago have lost their meaning, usages that would puzzle the best-read historian, traditions whose import baffles the most keen-sighted critic, tales that had come down from afar, and arts that had only become worse as they became old. It occurred to me that life would be happier if a little activity were infused into its flow, and I suggested that the use of clocks and watches might stir up the easy going crofters. "Oh," replied the genial humorist that guides the spiritual hopes of the island, "what is the use of your clocks and your Saxon civilization? We do not need them here. Our proverb tells us that the sun, the tide, and hunger are enough to mark the time. Your civilization is just a hurry, and it only does harm." The island of Tiree, which is about ten miles in length and three in breadth, is irregular in shape, with an extensive plain in the middle, and several huge cresent bays of pure white sand stretching along the coast and forming the public roads. With a satisfied twinkle in his sleepy eye, a Tireeman remarked to me: "Our roads ought be the best in the world, for they are repaired twice a day as regularly as the tide flows and ebbs."

Utilization of Solar Heat.

Paris Correspondence London Times.

At a popular fete in the Tuileries gardens I was struck with an experiment which seems deserving of the immediate attention of the English public and military authorities. Among the attractions of the fete was an apparatus for the concentration and utilization of solar heat, and, though the heat was not very brilliant, I saw this apparatus set in motion a printing machine which printed several thousand copies of a specimen newspaper entitled the Soleil Journal. The sun's rays are concentrated in a reflector which moves at the same rate as the sun and heats a vertical boiler setting the motive steam-engine at work. As may be supposed, the only object was to demonstrate the possibility of utilizing the concentrated heat of the solar rays; but I closely examined it, because the apparatus seems capable of great utility in existing circumstances. Here in France, indeed, there is a radical drawback—the sun is often overclouded. Thousands of years ago the idea of utilizing the solar rays must have suggested itself, and there are still savage tribes who know no other mode of combustion; but the scientific application has hitherto been lacking. This void this apparatus will fill up. About fifteen years ago Professor Mouchon, of Tours, began constructing such an apparatus, and his experiments have been continued by M. Pifre, who has devoted much labor and expense to realizing M. Mouchon's idea. A company has now come to his aid, and has constructed a number of apparatus of different size at a factory which might speedily turn out a large number of them. It is evident that in a country of uninterrupted sunshine the boiler might be heated in thirty or forty minutes. A portable apparatus could boil two and one-half quarts an hour, or, say, four gallons a day, thus supplying by distillation or ebullition six or eight men. The apparatus can be easily carried on a man's back, and on condition of water, even of the worst quality, being obtainable, good drinking and cooking water is insured. M. de Rougalmond, a young scientific writer, has just published an interesting volume on the invention. I was able yesterday to verify his statements, for I saw cider made, a pump set in motion, and coffee made in short, the calorific action of the sun superseding that of fuel. The apparatus, no doubt, has not yet reached perfection, but as it is it would enable the soldier in India or Egypt to procure in the field good water and to cook his food rapidly. The invention is of especial importance to England just now, but even when the Egyptian question is settled the Indian troops might find it of inestimable value. Red tape should for once be disregarded, and a competent commission forthwith sent to 30 Rue d'Assas, with instructions to report immediately, for every minute saved may avoid suffering for Englishmen fighting abroad for their country. I may, of course, be mistaken, but a commission would decide, and if the apparatus is good the slightest delay in its adoption would be deplorable.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is colorless; contains neither oil nor dye; and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

There will be no excursions from either Pueblo or Denver to Manitou to day.

No more exciting primaries have occurred in Colorado Springs for years than those of yesterday.

Senator Ingalls' lecture on Garfield will take place at the opera house on Thursday night next.

"Allow me to congratulate you" is the expression that Mr. A. G. Draper meets with on every side.

Mrs. W. A. H. Loveland was among the arrivals at Manitou yesterday. She is a guest at the Manitou house.

Mr F. E. Dow has returned from his eastern visit to purchase fall and winter goods for his clothing emporium.

Preparations are being made for an excursion of the Presbyterian Sunday school to Manitou on next Tuesday.

The excursion of the Methodist Episcopal church to Manitou has not yet been held. No definite date has been decided upon.

Col J H Breon and wife left for the east on last night's Thunderbolt with the expectation of remaining some three months at least.

Prof. H L Parker's private school opens to-morrow. Pupils who are not able to take a full course may take one or more studies at proportionate rates.

Mr A W Scott left yesterday morning on the Thunderbolt for Fort Collins, where he has accepted a position with a well-known drug firm of that place.

Dr. and Mrs. T. G. Horn will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of their marriage on Monday evening, September 4th, at their residence on Nevada avenue.

The regular monthly meeting of the city council will be held on Monday night. Considerable business of importance will be brought before the meeting.

Mrs. Governor J. P St. John, wife of the governor of Kansas, is sojourning for a short time in Colorado Springs. The governor is expected to join her in a few days.

Notwithstanding the fact that the political issues yesterday were very exciting, everything passed over harmoniously with the exception of some little discord at the polling place in precinct No. 6½.

Now that the political excitement is over it can be expected that some considerable interest will be taken in the field sports at the association grounds. What sports will be provided for is not yet known, but a complete programme will be announced in the GAZETTE.

The five day $4.50 tickets on the line of the Denver & Rio Grande have been abolished and tickets including one admission to the exposition are now sold for $2 good to return within three days. Single fare tickets to Denver, [illegible] 3 50 p m train, are sold for $1, on all other trains [illegible].

A game of ball was played at the association grounds yesterday afternoon between the Metcalfs and Denver and Rio Grande nine. The game was very loosely contested throughout and was easily won by the Metcalf nine in six innings by a score of 21 to 6. We understand that the Metcalfs are open for challenges from any nine in the city.

Mr. E. P. Stevens has sold his interest in the business of Hooker & Stevens to Mr. George Fallor and retires from active business on account of his continued ill health. Mr. Fallor comes to us from Cincinnati, where he has been engaged in the grocery business for a number of years and enjoys a reputation for integrity and ability that will commend him to the confidence of our community. Associated with Mr. Hooker we bespeak for the new firm a liberal patronage and a growing trade.

OUT WEST.

A duel over a cup of cold tea was fought at Denver on Friday last.

Hold ups are becoming entirely too frequent for comfort at Pueblo.

Emma Abbott will soon again open an engagement in the opera house.

The late storm has caused quite a large number to leave the mountains.

A large excursion from Ohio will arrive in Colorado the latter part of this month.

A game of base ball will take place between the Fort Collins and Alamosa clubs.

Boulder county claims to have one of the best mineral exhibits at the exposition.

The Leadville Blues are now playing in Missouri, and have so far been successful.

A Social and Literary club has been organized at Saguache. A limited number of members will be admitted.

T. C. Early has sued all three of the Leadville daily papers for libel, claiming $35,000 each.

All cities in the state will send representatives to the barbecue at Denver on September 6th.

A bear which had escaped its owner appeared in Durango last week and came near controlling the town.

Sanderson's stage coaches which first made the trip over Marshall Pass to Gunnison City in the summer of 1880 have made their last trip.

AUCTION.

IMPORTANT TO ALL—Kilpatrick & Brown have $50 000 worth of furniture, consisting of chamber suits, chairs, and in fact everything in the furniture line. They have concluded to put it up at public auction, and allow the people throughout the state to come and buy what they may need at their own price. You have a chance now that may not occur again, and can buy your goods at about 50 cents on the dollar. Kilpatrick & Brown never have done anything half way in business, and are willing, in order to dispose of $50 000 of the stock, to let it go at the value the public put on it, and in addition to this will pack every piece of goods bought at this sale and deliver them at the depot in Denver in the very best of order free of charge. The auction sale will take place at 283 and 285 Fifteenth street, Denver, and will commence Monday, September 4, and continue through the week only. Please remember the old stand 410 and 412 Lawrence street, will be open as usual with gentlemanly clerks in attendance, and the prices we guarantee will be the lowest found in Colorado, and lower than you can buy east and pay freight. Try and arrange your business so as to visit Denver and attend this auction at least one day during the greatest auction ever held in the west. 1
